We have remained silent as we did not want to speak out where God would not have us speak. However, we still unitedly remain opposed to any and all sale of pornographic materials, whether they be videos, magazines, to movies over the cable system.

The intent of this boycott was never to target any individuals or to do harm to any specific people. We are only seeking to stop an activity which we firm-ly believe is nothing but detri-mental to our city and society. Pornography is a corruption and perversion of the good which God has given us and it serves only to put distorted, twisted, images and ideas into minds and ultimately leads to minds and ultimately leads to the problems of immorality, marital discord, and divorce. Pornographic materials, whether they be videos or mag-azines, claim to offer "adult entertainment," but in reality offer corruption in all rela

Teen pregnancies and kids living in poverty:Should taxpayers do more?

Would higher taxes

solve the problem

of ever expanding numbers of fami-lies and kids living in poverty?

By John R. Smith
There are people who believe that you are shameful, mean-spirited, and hard-hearted because you aren't doing more to take care of poor children. At least that's the message that emerged from some of the news stories and editorials commenting on recent reports by certain child-advocacy organizations.
The first such report, an annual state-by-state survey by KIDS COUNT that evaluates the health, education, and well-being of children, ranked Florida 48th nationally - barely ahead of Mississipipi, Louisiana, and ranked Flerida 48th nationally-Mississipip. Louisians, and Washington, D.C. (Florida ranked 47th last year.) The sec-oid such report, by the United National Children's Fund (UNIGEF), concluded that, of all the world's industrialized countries, the United States treats poor children the worst. Are we that bad? Is this criticism deserved? Are we - Floridans and all Americans - unconcerned short the poor and are we trail was Americans - unconcerning the poor and are we truly not gent in taking care of "our children" Would higher taxes and bigger welfare programs, as suggested by some, solve the problem of ever expanding numbers of families and kids living in poverty! Here are some data that will provide perspective on at least some of these questions:

• From 1986 (year one of President Johnson's co-called War on Poverty) through 1994, total welfare spending in the United States was $5.4 trillion in constant 1993 dollars. (Note: A trillion is a thousand billion and a billion is a thousand million!)

In 1965, aggregate government welfare spending - federal, state, and local - was just over one percent of GDP. By 1993 it has risen to 5.1 percent of GDP, a level that's higher than the previous record set during the Great

the previous

Depression.

Present welfare spending by government exceeds $324 billion per year - that's more than $3,400 for every taxpaying household in the United States every year.

In addition to taxpayer-financed spending on welfare, voluntary charita-

ry taxpaying household in the very year.

to taxpayer-financed spending on welfare, voluntary charita-ble giving in the United States currently exceeds $125 billion per year, more than 80 percent of which is donated by individuals.

individuals.
Folks, those numbers are not the record of mean-spirited, uncaring people. In fact they bear witness to one of the most conscientious and unselfish efforts to eliminate erty?

unselfish efforts to eliminate poverty ever in history were in history to help the poor, the U.S. poverty rate, since dipping briefly in the late 70s, has increased steadily and is now almost exactly where it was in 1965. Worse still, the poverty rate for children — much of it attributable to the rising numbers of teenagers having children out of wedlock — is growing faster than any other age bracket. Here are some facts that will shed light on this particular Problem.

* Data compiled by Mathematical Policy Research, Inc. shows that the link between welfare sependency and illegitimacy is irrefutable. A study they did in 1995 revealed that, of those who had received welfare for five years, unmarried mothers are nine times more likely to be in that group than are married mothers.

* A recent study of US. welfare patterns by the Public Agenda Foundation found that 64 percent of welfare recipients polled agreed with the statement that "Welfare encourages teenagers to have children out of wedlock." Additionally, sixty-two percent of these west of figure recipients. children out of wedlock." Addi-tionally, sixty-two percent of those same welfare recipients agreed that "the system under-mines the work ethic and encourages people to be laxy."

In 1960, unwed U.S. teenage girls had 91,700 babies. The corresponding number in 1992 was 365,000 - 298 percent jumn in out-of-a 298 percent jump in out-of-wedlock births to U.S. wedlock births to U.S. teenagers. (In 1992, in fact, 70 percent of all U.S. births to women under the age of 20 were to unwed mothers.)

• Illegitimate births in 1960 represented 5.3 percent of all births. In 1962, Illegitimate births accounted for 30.1 percent of all births - five times higher than in 1960. (Incidentally, Florida's 1992 ratio of illegitimate births was 34.2 percent; 14 percent above the overall U.S. rate.) What can we conclude?

What can we conclu So, what can we learn from this data? First, they tell us that the steady, three-decade rise in teenage illegitimacy (along with the poverty related to that behavior) has not hapto that behavior) has not hap-pened bicause Americans have refused to open their pocket-books to the needy. On the con-trary, our nation's thirty-year effort to end poverty has been nothing less than heroic, and the taxpayers who have con-tributed trillions of their hard-earned dollars to this effort are due praise, not scorn.

due praise, not scorn. Second, this data tells us and welfare recipients the selves corroborate it - t these social and welfare recipients themselves corroborate it - that these social pathologies (teenage illegitimacy and welfare dependency) are the result of years of government programs and policies that have rewarded irresponsible behavior while penalizing responsible behavior. Just responsible behavior. Just have kids you can't support and you get all kinds of handouts - subsidized (or free) housing, food stamps, free medical care, free child care, subsidized utilities, free lunch, free this and free that.

But study hard, graduate, get married, get a job, work hard, get promoted, and save a few dollars for the future and you are penalized with progressively higher taxes because the social engineers say 'it's fair.' (Is it'?) Finally, we must understand

Fish senses are well developed

What do fish hear? What do they smell? How good is their vision?

Any fisherman knows that loud noises in the boat (like dropping a tackle box on the deck) spook fish.
Scent manufacturers have described the olfactory senses in detail.

Vision is probably more aportant to fisherman than it

In the natural water-world of game fish, vision is dependent on water clarity and light intensity. Sounds and vibra-tions, however, travel better in water than air, and offset the limitations of sight. Fish will utilize their full range of senses to feed, especially when visibility is marginal, according to the fishing experts at Mariner Outboards.

Water touches fish constant ly, and fish have well-devel oped senses to cope with changing situations. Their "important" sense at the moment depends on signal strength, distance and water condition.

The messages of the environment are interpreted by fish who have all their senses tuned in all the time. Their sight is capable of detecting nent out to 50 feet. Their smell up to hundreds of yards

The hearing is good up to thou-sands of yards. Their organs translate the external world into nerve impulses, which cause them to flee, eat, investi-gate, drop deeper, move upstream, head for warmer temperatures, etc.
